THIRTY-FIRST SUNDAY OF THE YEAR. Theme: The True Religion of Jesus Christ

"One of the principal rules of religion is, to lose no occasion of serving God. And, since he is invisible to our eyes, we are to serve him in our neighbour; which he receives as if done to himself in person, standing visibly before us." - John Wesley (1703-1791).

The Christian world marks 500 years of the Christian Reformation led by Martin Luther. The blessings of the Reformation are tolerance and openness among different religions. The presence of Jesus among the Scribes and the Pharisees can sometimes challenge the status quo of religion. He admired the work of the Pharisees and Scribes as they preaching and teaching, but in so doing, he realized they were trying to draw attention to themselves: "Everything they do is done to attract attention". They sought the place of honour at feasts, the best seats in synagogues and reverent titles. They have become victims of their own pride and vanity. They had forgotten whom they were serving.

Jesus words to the Scribes and the Pharisees remind us that when we are doing his work, we must be seeking to serve not to be served. It is natural for us to want to draw attention to ourselves. Perhaps because of our fallen nature, we enjoy being at the centre of events.

The greatest – those in positions of leadership and authority – must possess the largest heart, a servant's heart. When we find ourselves consumed by prideful attitudes, we need to repent and ask the Lord to help us serve as he served. In the Religion of Jesus Christ, it is the greatest who become the servants of all.
